

DOLPHIN PLIGHT ... OR PLAN?

People frequently ask me about the plight of the dolphins on our planet...specifically about the deaths in the fishing nets, and the man-made pollution of the oceans.

An interesting thing is, up until now, I didn't think about those issues!

I'm reading a book about other people's swim experiences with dolphins, and almost every one ends with the person returning home and joining every environmental group they can find. I don't have a problem with that, I question the motivation. Are they taking these actions out of love for the dolphins or out of fear?

My sense is that the dolphin consciousness has engineered these scenarios as a huge gift for us humans. Think about how society has been impacted by their tragic "deaths". These incidents have brought mass consciousness awareness to the dolphin species. How would society be impacted if they just died quietly in the depths of the ocean, surrounded by the love and support of those staying behind? I'll bet they have that choice.

To me, this is part of the grand design...and they are doing it for us! Think of every household that has tuna cans in their cupboards with the dolphin-safe ensignia on the labels! Their love energy is contained in every can! It's in the grocery stores and in the houses of main street U.S.A. It's brilliant!

Now, back to the question of motivation. If these issues hold a charge for you, search inside yourself. Does it bring up anger, judgment, hate, terror, a sense of victimization? As with everything else in our world, the dolphins are our mirrors. Perhaps they have presented you with a mirror of something inside of you that is surfacing to be healed. Perhaps there are nets around you, preventing you from living a life of unbridled joy and freedom. If so, aren't you dying, too? Can you learn to jump over your own nets? Or better yet, choose to swim in a net-free zone!

I always try to look for the higher truth of things. I feel that by succumbing to the fear-based energies, I'm not helping anybody, no matter how much money I may pour into worthy organizations. If I can hold the love vibration, and try to see beyond the surface into the divine perfection of each experience, I have a better chance of keeping peace of heart and mind. Then I feel I'm doing my part to heal myself and the planet, and all sentient beings with whom we live.

What I see in these beautiful beings is unconditional love and compassion for humanity. They are here in service to us and to the planet, and they serve in joy!

I have been told that the dolphins are in the process of leaving the planet. For the most part, their job here is done. They're going home now. The ones staying behind are staying as healers and teachers for us. It's up to all of us to learn the lessons and heal.

©Copyright Linda Shay 1997, 2004